Other information to inspire:

"We spent the weekend camping at one big meeting; we also went exploring the caves during the day and sitting around the campfire of an evening. It was so easy and relaxing."

In 1865, Wombeyan became the first area in Australia to be reserved for the protection of caves and there are still structures dating from the early 1900's in some caves.

The Wombeyan Caves Wilderness Weekend boasts some of NSW's most impressive show caves, including Figtree Cave, widely regarded as one of the state's best self-guided cave experience, and others that you can experience on a guided tour. Aside from caves, the camp also has a few walks, including the Waterfall track that features scenic waterfall views and Mares Forest Creek track.

The camp is an easy drive from Sydney or Canberra, so it's a great place to escape for a weekend getaway. You can bring your caravan, tent or motor home to camp out overnight or you can book into one of the dorms, cabins or the cosy Post Office Cottage. You might find you have some visitors to the campground; the kangaroos can be quite inquisitive.
